Four secret service men went yester-ay to the flat at 516 West 134th street, day to the nat at 515 west 134th street, which Muret, as "George Miller," and Schmidt rigged up as a counterfeiting plant, and confiscated everything in sight that had not been seized already by the police in their early morning raid.

Chief Henry declared after the visit of his men that there was no doubt of the fact that elaborate plans had been made to add to the output of bogus money. In the complaints subsequently drawn up it was alleged that Muret and Schmidt had been engaged in making counterfelt The latter allegation was based on the discovery in the flat of partly burned "proofs" of unfinished bogus bills bearing an imitation of Uncle Sam's red seal and "X" marks indicating the de-nomination of the bills.

FAVORITES

There is one charge which can never be levelled at this Company, and that is, that it "plays favorites."

The only considerations which enter into our choice of one sub-contractor against another, are, first, the stability of his business, and thereafter the speed, the quality, and the cost of his work.

In other words, we do not "play favorites" with Tom, Dick and Harry, but we do "play favorites" with Economy, Quality and Speed.

Assistant District Attorney Deacon Murphy is looking that up.

"Scoundrel," Says Muret.

Muret, according to Father Evers, looks upon Schmidt in the light of "a consummate scoundrel," and called him such, while Schmidt expresses great sorrow that his friend Muret finds himself involved in trouble.

"The is only a personal opinion of mine," the most tired and perhaps the happiest man is New York as the result of the clean sweep made by the men under his direction in solving the mystery of the Mudson River murder.

Messmer, the wife slayer in the Tombs, who had been Schmidt's cellmate, went on strike yesterday morning. He said he had asked the priest why he killed he his wife and Schmidt replied: "For love, and I love you too." Messmer, alarmed, sent a hurried message to the warden asking to be transferred. The frightened murderer was moved to another cell.

said yesterday that after the dentist took up his residence there and started practising they noticed that he was in the habit of keeping late hours. There were folks also who told stories of a woman who called on him so frequently that her face became very familiar.

Once, it was said, a violent scream was heard in the dental office and a woman ran into the street. Of course no one knew that the screamer wasn't a woman who couldn't stand the pain of having a tooth pulled and fied into the night.

"I thought she was going to place the body in the bedspread, and maybe wrap body in the bedspread, and maybe wrap this aunt, Mrs. Wysong. He said that when his mother brought action for the payment of her share of the estate in 1898 the courts found she was entitled to $1,128,626, which was paid to her. He averred that since his mother got her share of the estate in real estate and securities "it has been greatly reduced in value and there has been a loss to the bedspread, placed bushes over the body and went through the swamp back to the land."
